ROMNEY TAKES 6 SUPER TUESDAY STATES, SANTORUM NETS 3.

CBS News projects that Mitt Romney will win Ohio's key primary contest Tuesday, after a neck-and-neck race with rival Rick Santorum in the pivotal battleground state. Overall, Romney took six Super Tuesday states, compared to Santorum's three.

With more than 99 percent of precincts reporting in Ohio, Romney has 38 percent support to Santorum's 37 percent. Newt Gingrich is in third place with 15 percent and Ron Paul follows with 9 percent.

Mitt Romney also won primaries in Virginia, Massachusetts and Vermont, as well as the Idaho and Alaska caucuses. Rick Santorum won primaries in Tennessee and Oklahoma, and the North Dakota caucuses. In Georgia, Gingrich clinched his first primary victory since South Carolina's January 21 primary contest.

Ron Paul did not win any contests on Tuesday, but he did finish second in four states: Vermont, Idaho, North Dakota and Virginia.

CBS News estimates show Romney now has a total of 361 delegates, Santorum has 112, Gingrich has 80 and Paul has 24. In remarks to reporters following the Ohio call for Romney, his campaign spokesman Ryan Williams said the campaign was "pleased" to have "gained the trust of Ohio voters."

"Nearly a week ago Governor Romney was behind in some polls by double digits. But Ohio voters responded to his pro-jobs and pro-growth message, and rallied behind him [in] the days before the primary and helped push him to victory tonight," Williams said.

Speaking out of Boston before his victory was projected in the Buckeye State, Romney was hopeful that his campaign was "going to get more" wins under its belt by the end of the night, and that by his count, the delegate situation "looks good."

"Tonight, we're -- we're doing some counting. We're counting up the delegates for the convention, and it looks good. And we're counting down the days until November, and that looks even better," Romney told an enthusiastic crowd.

With almost all precincts reporting in Massachusetts, Romney, who served as the state's governor between 2003 and 2007, was ahead overwhelmingly, with 72 percent support.

In his remarks, Romney went on to accuse President Obama of being "unresponsive" to the wishes of the American people, and blasted him for allegedly operating "by command instead of by consensus."

How Romney won Ohio

How Rick Santorum won Tennessee and Oklahoma

"President Obama seems to believe he's unchecked by the Constitution," Romney said. "He's unresponsive to the will of our people. He operates by command instead of by consensus. In a second term, he'd be unrestrained by the demands of re-election. And if there's one thing we cannot afford is four years of Barack Obama with no one to answer to."

A win in Ohio would have been considered a huge boon for either Romney or Santorum on Super Tuesday. For Romney, the victory could signal a return to the so-called inevitability of his candidacy; for Santorum, it would have proven his ability to win in a crucial swing state with a large, diverse population.

Polls showed the two candidates neck-and-neck in the past several weeks, although the most recent surveys trended toward Romney.

Speaking to supporters in Ohio, Santorum called Tuesday a "big night" for his campaign -- but emphasized that he was "up against enormous odds."

"This was a big night tonight, lots of states. We're going to win a few, we're going to lose a few, but as it looks right now, we're going to get at least a couple of gold medals and a whole passel full of silver medals," he said. "We went up against enormous odds, not just here in the state of Ohio, where -- who knows how much we were outspent -- but in every state. There wasn't a single state in the list that I just gave you where I spent more money than the people I was able to defeat to win that state. In every case, we overcame the odds."

According to exit polls, the economy was the top issue for voters in the primary states, while the ability to defeat President Obama is the candidate quality that matters most to voters.

In Tennessee, with nearly all precincts reporting, Santorum led Romney with 37 percent to 28 percent. In Oklahoma, with all precincts reporting, Santorum bested Romney with 34 percent to 28 percent.

In Georgia, which Gingrich represented in Congress for 20 years, the former House speaker was ahead with 47 percent support with nearly all precincts reporting. Romney came in second with 26 percent. Santorum followed with 20 percent.

Exit polls out of Georgia showed Gingrich winning among men, women, and white evangelical voters. He also led among very conservative voters and those who said the economy was their top issue.

Gingrich's victory in Georgia could give the candidate a much-needed boost in momentum after a string of losses in recent nominating contests.

In remarks in Atlanta after the Georgia polls closed Tuesday night, Gingrich made clear that he plans to stay in the race, despite his recent struggles.

"Remember when it was Tim Pawlenty who was going to crowd me out? And remember then when it was Michele Bachmann? And then it was our good friend, Herman Cain the first time? And then, for a brief moment, it was Donald Trump almost," Gingrich told supporters. "And then it was our good friend, Rick Perry, then it was Herman Cain the second time, and now it's Santorum."

FLASH MOB CROWD INVADES ICERAYS GAME

The Corpus Christi IceRays hosted the Amarillo Bulls on Thursday night inside the American Bank Center and at the start of the game the rink was fairly empty, but, for a reason. The week prior to the contest, the IceRays front office planned a flash mob crowd. Groups and individuals from all over the area poured into the American Bank Center's third floor before the game making signs, painting faces, and carrying noise makers. The flash mob sat where nobody saw them and at the first whistle after the 16:00 minute mark of the first period, thousands of fans poured into the rink electrifying the crowd.

"We got it done. It turned out to be a great thing," said IceRays General Manager Pat Dunn. "There was electricity in the building that night and it was a lot of fun."

The event took a lot of planning and coordinating from office staff, interns, and group leaders. "It was a blast working with the IceRays," said Lillia M. De La Garza, Certified Prevention Specialist at Project Turnaround. "Each group had tons of fun cheering for the IceRays."

The IceRays are on the road this weekend as they take on the New Mexico Mustangs. Puck drops at 8:05PM CST, coverage begins at 7:50PM with the IceRays Pregame Show on ESPN Radio 1440AM.
